I could see men standing beside a wooded area. They were not inside the area but standing near a wooded area. It looked like something could have been dug up.

Later, I felt I was in a rather warm climate.

I saw a round wall
It was hard and it was purple.
I ~~could see~~ all hands touching the wall.

Each time I attempted to cross this weather front envelope (M-Thu) I perceived it as though looking at a weather pattern from a high altitude over a large body of water. The above sketch pertains, however, it is not located above the area, but rather appears to be a map of some type - (A/C. weather map, showing currents or cloud/storm formations).

The colors black and white are most important. There is an obvious lack of other colors.

This is perceived as a photograph of a group of people, again the black & white, and gray. There is a feeling of relief, pride and happiness associated with these people, along with tragedy and pain. The perception of pain is political (ADL-Reagan).

Running a time line (mentally) this seems to be a past rather than future event, but I can't pin it down any further.
